i was walking down the road last month, listening to fugazi's instrumental song: "I'm so tired". it felt touching & i was already as the title said, tired; walking when the piano solo came, i start humming in the tune of Ian & simply these words came to me. i don't know if they have significance to me. the ecstacy part comes from XO. weeknd's thing and honestly i don't know why that specific thing came to mind but i remember it's full form.

i think 7th june when i wrote that song, it was actually my first time listening to i'm so tired.

the cover image show cases my hand in a weird postition with a thread cutter in my hand, along with my bird skull ring that i got back on the 2nd of feb with at friends at kala ghoda. i really didn't know what i doing particular with that photo but placement of the hand really came out clean and editing the photo and first visualizing it as an album cover really gave me a high because i had never done this and it was already look so good. when i had lost alot of my data, that project went with it, just the editing part of the project, original file was backed up and so it was anyways pretty simple to remove the background and have a transparent image of the hand, cool enough.

For a few months i stopped working on that piece because i was exploring other ways of editing & having fun. when it came the fact that i had written material, poem, song, etc. i realised i had this song just recorded on my voice note app & i wrote it down & chose this image as the song cover.

at first i was messing with the threshold and there's a layer that's blackend & that's the first result of messing with the slider then the second version came out as shown:

and then i used the posterize effect, it changed every.

choosing the song name wasn't that difficult as the current most listen to artist anyways for me was the frozen autumn. Literally stylizied using this font in italics LOL.

they have a song of their emotional screening device album called "freon heart, fayence mind". i LOVE that song, i took the first word from that and saturn from an artist i like who i first discovered through quinn, a hyperpop artist back after 2022 most likely. that's where i get the font usually, this one. Palatino Linotype. Literally inspired by the frozen autumn's use of this font.

freon saturn
